Organiser's comments - Frank Major.

To those who took up the apparently uninspiring challenge of Princess Anne Park, many thanks. Some had reported having previously driven down the A182 not realising what was just out of view so I hope you all enjoyed yourselves. I hope that everybody was reasonably well surprised. The relatively dry conditions contributed to some good times and of course the sparse undergrowth at this time of year made some of the controls more accessible.

My particular thanks go to Dave Caudwell who so efficiently produced 'his most complicated map' to date and for his course planning - some good route choice conundrums were provided to trap the unwary. Thanks also to Steve Murdoch who so diligently phoned me up at 0715 hours, on the day to correct a control description list. We thought that the park might be vandal prone, but no serious reports were received. One or two complaints came from competitors on the blue and green course about marker 79 (controls 26 and 3 respectively) which should have read 'W stream'. It has been reported that this control was moved during the course of the competition, perhaps as a correction or was it gamesmanship? To those who were disorientated, our regrets and hope that it didn't spoil your performance too much.

Finally, my general thanks to all the NN team who so willingly gave of their time to ensure that this first open event at Washington was a reasonable success.

The Lambton Worm

As competitors will recall the start area for the event was near to Worm Hill. The following extract from the Borough of Sunderland's 'Guide to Wearside' explains the historical significance of Worm Hill and its association with the Lambton Worm.

The Lambton Worm - a mythical beast reputed to have lived by the river Wear, and to have wound itself round Worm Hill.

'Worm' (pronounced 'warm' in Durham dialect) is the local word for dragon. In this traditional local tale a young member of the Lambton family persists in fishing in the river Wear on a Sunday despite many warnings. Catching only a very small worm, he contemptuously throws it into a nearby well. While he is away crusading in the Holy Land the worm grows into a huge dragon which ravages the local countryside. It is so large that it can coil itself nine times round a hill, and requires the milk of nine cows daily to keep its appetite satisfied. On his return home Lambton takes the advice of a witch as to how best to confront the beast. For his part he agrees to kill the first living being that he encounters after the slaying. He destroys the worm, but then fails to fulfil his side of the bargain when he meets his father on the way back from the river. By so doing he condemns nine generations of Lambtons to untimely deaths.
